

Point of View

Business Central asks readers:

“What kind of person would you consider to be the ideal networker?”

Justin Wacker • Steam Brothers/SB Restoration

“A very outgoing individual- someone who’s not shy and is willing to take chances.”

Dave Faust • Law of Attraction Center

“Someone who is outgoing, genuine, and selfless.”

Shari Wahlin • Big Brothers, Big Sisters of Central Minnesota

“Somebody who is easy to approach and is comfortable approaching others.”

Chris LeDuc • St. Cloud Area Family YMCA

“Someone who can move gracefully through multiple conversations while making everyone feel important.”

Corey Boe • Cartridge World

“Someone who is willing to talk to people and put themselves ‘out there.’”

Jackie Tendrup • Finken Water Centers & Finken Plumbing, Heating, & Cooling

“Somebody who is outgoing, talkative, personable, and is trustworthy.”

Laura Tangen • Edina Realty

“The ideal networker is outgoing, friendly, likes to talk to new people, and is confident about the business s/he works for.”